

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WINNIE'S WONDERINGS

Winnie wondered.

She wondered whether it was better to be willing and eager to help or whether it was better to be clever and smart.

She remembered the time when she had run for the doctor when the little boy next door had been ill. There had been a dreadful storm and the wires were down and there was no way of getting the doctor save by going for him.

How Winnie had run! The little boy's family had really saved his life. They had given her such a lovely bracelet as a reward—made of real gold. She hadn't known or thought of a reward. Perhaps that was why she enjoyed the reward so much!

Then she wondered whether it was more fun to read late and have all that pleasure, even though she was sleepy in the morning, or whether it was better to be fresh for games and play in the morning and go right to sleep at night.

Sometimes when the family had gone out she had sat up way beyond bedtime and had only just turned out the light before they had come in. Then the globe of the light was still warm. Even a silent thing like a light globe could be a little tale.

But of course that was reading too late. And then she was so fearfully sleepy in the morning.

She wondered whether it was more fun to climb over the great chest in the linen room and have that as a playground where she could make up all sorts of games, or whether it was more fun where all the toys were and the games were all in readiness.

She wondered, too, whether she liked the country better than the seashore.

At the seashore there was the sand and there were rocks and there was a lovely salty taste to the air.

But in the country there was a sunny warmth and lovely, lazy feeling, and there were more flowers.

In the country was the old attic, too, where she could dress up in clothes that had belonged to her great-grandmother.

They were torn and shabby, but they had been worn to splendid receptions.

Winnie used to dress up in these gay racy days and make low bows, pretending to be the different handsome gentlemen and beautiful ladies who had been to the receptions where these had been worn.

She wondered whether she liked the winter better than the summer.

In the winter sometimes the streets got so slippery that the coasting was really thrilling, and there was skating, too.

She had even been ice-boating, which was quite the most thrilling thing in the world.

But in the summer the bathing was such fun, and to go out in a boat along the shore and pretend to throw out mail as the boat passed each little cove. That was a glorious game.

Then in the summer there were such nice games to play and one didn't have to bundle up.

In the summer the woods were so lovely and cool and the shadows danced so prettily with the sun and the trees.

But in the winter, on the other hand, there were sleigh rides and steaming hot suppers afterward.

Yes, Winnie wondered.

She couldn't make up her mind what she liked best.

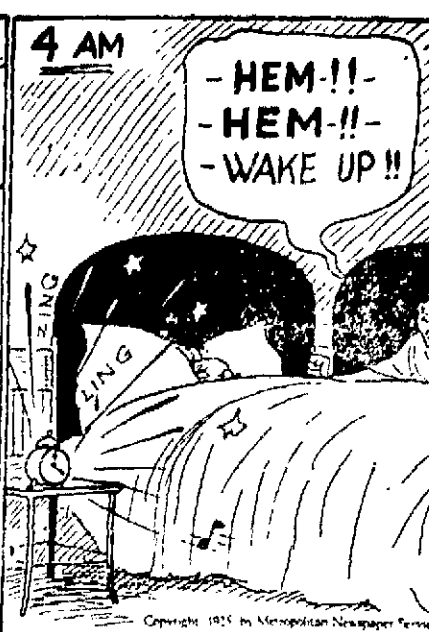

And then her wonders began to go and she was puzzled no longer.

She liked lots of things—you didn't have to decide what you liked best when you could like many things at a great deal.

So she didn't waste her time wondering what she liked best or what was best or second-best.

She just enjoyed each thing in turn, and when she could be of great help in some one it was well known that Winnie was the one to be relied upon. It was so nice to have this all clear at last!

GAS BUGGIES—Did You Ever Know It To Fail?

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

Faith, absolute, unconquerable faith, is one of the essential concomitants, therefore one of the great secrets of success. We must realize that one carries his success or his failure with him, that it does not depend upon outside conditions.—R. W. Trine.

SPECIAL GOOD THINGS

Some day when nothing seems to appeal to the appetites, for a simple dessert try:

Spiced Bananas.—One can use the unripe fruit for this dish, as the cooking softens and ripens it. Take two teaspoonsful each of allspice and cinnamon, one-half cupful of water, one-half cupful of lemon or orange juice or a mixture, one cupful of sugar, set over the fire and let come to the boiling point. Add six bananas, cook until tender but not broken. Serve on a hot platter with the sauce poured over them.

Chocolate Junket.—Grate unsweetened chocolate (two tablespoonsful), and add to a pint of lukewarm milk, after it has been melted over steam. Dissolve half of a junket tablet in a tablespoonful of water, add to the milk and stir well; also add three tablespoonsful of sugar, mix and pour into sherbet cups; let stand in a warm place to thicken. Serve topped with sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

Celery au Jus.—Remove the tops from two bunches of celery, wash and trim and scrape. Cook in acidulated water, boiling five minutes, then drain. Melt three tablespoonsful of butter, add three tablespoonsful of flour and a cupful and a half of the celery liquor. Season with salt and pepper and a few drops of Worcestershire sauce; add the celery and simmer thirty minutes. Arrange the celery in the center of a hot dish, strain the sauce over it and garnish with finely chopped red pepper.

Orange and Nut Bread.—Sift together five cupfuls of pastry flour, one cupful of Graham flour, one teaspoonful of salt, six teaspoonfuls (level) of baking powder and one cupful of sugar; add one-half cupful each of candied orange peel and pecan meats, chopped; mix well. Beat one egg and add with one cupful of milk to the first mixture. Turn into a buttered brick bread pan and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve as sandwiches with marmalade and tea.

21,000 A LETTER.

Sale of Autograph Proves Rarely Factor in Price.

There sold in Philadelphia the other day a set of autographs of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Whose brought the highest price? John Adams. Samuel Adams. Benjamin Franklin. Thomas Jefferson? Not at all. The top price went for the signature of Button Gwinnett to a document. Some collector wanted those fourteen letters, $14,000 worth. Next to top price went for a signature—not even an autographed letter—of Thomas Lynch, Jr. It brought $2,600. Both Gwinnett and Lynch died before the Revolution ended, both were young men, and neither had bulked large in public affairs. Letters from Washington and Jefferson were treasured in their lifetimes, by their contemporaries; letters from Gwinnett and Lynch were not. Letters of Washington and Jefferson are in comparison, common.

What has all this to do with business? asks "The Nation's Business." It's an instance of the rarity factor in price. Part of the price of diamonds is their rarity. And yet rarity isn't enough. There must be some other quality before there is a market. Thousands of men lived lives that paralleled in time those of Gwinnett and Lynch; yet no one wants their signatures. They didn't sign the Declaration. There are other signers whose letters can be bought for a few dollars. They wrote many.

A price is a complex thing.

WEST SAUGERTIES.

West Saugerties, March 25.—John Carr is making a very nice road from his garage to the main road, quite an improvement on the place.

Mrs. Doman, who during the winter months has occupied Mrs. Peterson's residence, has moved her belongings to John Becker's cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Penick are entering company from Holland.

Dr. T. C. T. is the guest of his host, Mrs. Clara Wilson.

Warwick Corder of Kingston.

SHOKAN.

Shokan, March 26.—A welcome is extended to all wishing to attend the Community Club which meets every Tuesday evening at Winchell's Hall. Play your favorite game, dominoes, cards, etc.

The Monday evening social and dance held every Monday evening at Winchell's Hall was well attended. An enjoyable time was had by both young and old. It is getting quite popular for the children to bring their parents along. Before leaving a great many told of the enjoyable evening they had spent and of their desire to come again.

REASON ENOUGH.

Much of the controversy over tax reduction, grade crossings, budget and other subjects before the Legislature on which the Governor and Republicans were unable to agree could have been adjusted had it been possible for the majority members of the Legislature to feel that Governor Smith was actually sincere. It is really safe to say that the Republicans were so suspicious of every move and suggestion of the Governor's that in some instances, perhaps, they may have opposed something worthy of consideration. Nevertheless, the Republicans, due to past experience, could not contentedly accept the Governor's ideas as one hundred per cent sincere.

Ever since Governor Smith waged his campaign two years ago, and, as some said, on the wet side of the wet and dry issue, and then after election announced that the wet and dry problem was a Federal matter and not a State responsibility, much of what he has said since has had to be taken with a grain of salt. The New York Herald-Tribune in a story written at that period, quoting somebody who had suggested the Governor, said, "that during the campaign Al promised us schoolers of beer but after he was elected all we got were resolutions." No line ever written on the Governor did him more injury because it attacked his sincerity and there was some measure of support for the assertion.

It is reasonable to admit that some of the recommendations of the Governor are worth debating even if they are far from perfect, but the truth is the Republicans can not reach a conclusion that the Governor's advice is free from political tricks and trickery. They were something hidden in everything that emanates from the executive chamber. This is not the fault of the Republicans, for if the Governor has a reputation of being insincere he had to earn it himself.

There is no doubt that the major portion of the argument between the executive and Legislature could have been avoided had it been possible for the Republicans to accept the Governor's messages as dead on the level. Under the circumstances if everything he says is received with doubt it is obvious that but little progress can be anticipated. Thus it was natural to expect that the Governor would meet with opposition, for if there were no other reason than his reputed insincerity that would be sufficient to warrant examination of everything he writes and analysis of everything he says.

BEST "SPRING TONIC."

Doctors say we should get plenty of fresh air. They urge us to keep our windows open while we sleep and be out in the open whenever it is possible. They say it means added years to our lives. Nature's medicines, sunshine and fresh air, are wonderful tonics and are available to nearly all of us. The medicines also tell us to be at peace with ourselves and with the world, and they urge us to have bright and cheerful thoughts. That advice isn't always easy to follow, but it is worth an effort.

Of course you have seen some faces looking longingly out of office windows these warm days. They are the faces of fishermen. You can bet on that. They know that one week from Saturday, which is April 4th and the first Saturday in the month, the State of New York allows them to go out and fish for trout. These fellows are going to get lots of sunshine and lots of fresh air and are going to have powerful thoughts. You who are ill in bed should go with them.

Get your fish pole, dig some worms and while Saturday comes get out on some small stream and match your wits against the wily trout. To have a successful day does not mean that you must come back with your creel full. Only the same has this thing. Spend the day enjoying some stream. Take some time to eat and when you get home and your eyes open look at the things that nature offers.

That you will come back at night, spent in certain, but you will have spent a day out of doors with your mind at ease and you will see in your mind that the medicine men know best.

what they are talking about when they tell us to get out in the open. There is no better or cheaper tonic in the world than a day out of doors along the bank of a trout stream.

Gandhi, the celebrated mystic and hero of the plain people of India, in his published reply to the advances of the Bolsheviks at Moscow, says: "I am ignorant of exactly what Bolshevism is, but I do know that in so far as it is based on violence and the denial of God it repels me." Gandhi's religion may be peculiar, but it sounds genuine, and he knows a good deal about Bolshevism, too.

EFFECTS OF CITY LIFE.

If we were to look up the lives of many of the world's great men, we would find that they came from farms.

If we looked up the lives of many of the inmates of our asylums and prisons, we would likewise find that they came from the farms.

Perhaps an ideal way for this matter would be for our young people to stay on the farms during the early part of their lives, and learn to do the hard work of the farm, strengthen their bodies in the fresh air, and then come to the city to make their mark upon the world.

If they have no desire to come to the city, no desire to do other than make things grow by care and thought, then the country is that much richer by this thought and effort.

Now two kinds of people come from the farm to the cities: those that can adjust themselves to the city, and those that cannot.

Those that can adjust themselves soon make headway. They find that their habit of early rising, their willingness to work, their ability to do various things for themselves and others, their actual habit of doing their own thinking, all make for progress in the city. The other type that cannot adjust themselves, are but making trouble for themselves and for their fellow citizens.

What is my thought? That a great many of our "nervous" cases, people who just can't get along with other people, those who seem just a bit queer or odd to others, those who seem to lag a little behind, have made a mistake in leaving the farm or the life in the village or country.

They are the ones who have inherited what is called a "nervous" disposition. One of their parents or grandparents was a nervous type, was perhaps considered a bit queer by his neighbors in the country, just as long as this man or woman remains in the country, in the quietness and serenity of farm life, he or she is able to live a life of use to themselves and the community.

But if such a one goes to the city, then the knocks, the lack of adjustment, brings to the surface this "nervous" trait, and trouble begins. Now a man or woman should have courage enough to tackle the city or anything else. It would be bad business for them to feel afraid to do so. It would be an admission of inferiority which would be injurious to their self respect.

But if in the city anything is brought to the surface that would indicate that the nervousness inherited is being developed further, then back to the country would be a wise course.

HIGHLAND TO PLAY
MOHONK SCHOOL NINE.

The members of the Highland High baseball team have been turning out for the past week for practice and will open the season April 14, when they will take on the Mohonk school team.

The only losses suffered by Highland through graduation include "Baldy" Star, moundsman of last season, who now attends the N. Y. U., and first baseman "Eddie" Van Wageningen, now attending Eastman. The bulk of the pitching this year will be taken care of by Fisher, who will be backed by Hasbrouck and Clark. The catchers' berth will be held by "Lewie" Countrymen, first will be covered by Art Clark, while second is still a question, but it looks like Cowley for the key stone. Captain Earl Gerald will again play in his old position at short, and the hot corner will find Bunny Hasbrouck cooling things off around there. Bunny will alternate with Fisher in the box.

For the outfield Eckert will play center, while right and left will fall to Nolan, Barnes and Gaffney. With this outfit they hope to equal last year's record of eleven victories in thirteen starts. They have booked names for the coming season with Highland, New Falls, Poughkeepsie, High Falls, Rhinebeck and other fast ones in the Hudson valley.

Dennistoun Case
Stirs England

Intrigues Disclosed by Trial Not Representative of British Society, Says Daily Telegraph—Canon of Westminster Reminded of Rome's Decay.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
London, March 26.—Justice McCordie today reserved decision in the suit of Mrs. Dorothy Dennistoun against her former husband, Colonel Ian Dennistoun in which a jury awarded her $25,000 damages and $5,000 debt claims.

The case, which has been occupied by legal arguments from the time of the verdict until Justice McCordie's announcement today, has become a target for widespread comment.

The Daily Telegraph and other newspapers are defending British society, claiming that only a small portion of it has been represented in the vivid intrigues brought out in the Dennistoun testimony.

Canon Donaldson of Westminster Abbey, on the other hand, in a statement published by the Evening Standard, declared the case filled him with revulsion. He said it reminded him of the "decay of ancient Rome and the moral dissolution which preceded its final upbraid."

He announced that it was "the idle rich who foster false standards of wealth and dignity."

Meanwhile Desmond Huston, Captain, biographer of General Sir John Cowans, named by Mrs. Dennistoun as her protector and her husband's benefactor, writes defending the character of the British soldier who was a popular figure at the time of his death.

Today We Celebrate

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS.

The first great educational movement for promoting the solidarity of the English-speaking world was the Rhodes scholarship fund, provided for in the will of Cecil Rhodes, the South African Empire-builder and statesman, sometimes called the "Diamond King," who died in Cape town twenty-three years ago today.

In his will Rhodes left about $1,000,000 to found a number of scholarships at Oxford. Two were offered to every state and territory in the union, and to every English-speaking colony and province, while five were set apart for students of German descent, the latter provision an afterthought, being explained in a codicil. Rhodes felt a bitter resentment towards the then Kaiser William because of his telegram to Oom Paul Kruger, but in 1901 Rhodes visited Berlin and made the acquaintance of the emperor. He wanted permission to build a telegraph line through German East Africa, and the German Rhodes scholarships are the testimony of his appreciation of the Kaiser's favorable action.

Before his death Cecil Rhodes selected his last resting place in the spot he loved best, on a high plateau in the Matopos Hills, and on his tomb his friends inscribed his last words, "So Much to do, so little Done." The lady who are so fond of "killing time" would do well to ponder over these words from a man who never knew an idle moment, and really built a new empire in Africa.

GENEVIEVE WARD.

Most romantic was the career of Genevieve Ward, the famous actress, who delighted three generations of theater-goers. Born in New York about 87 years ago, she was the daughter of a colonel in the United States Army. She was sent to Europe as a child to have a voice trained, and at 17 fell in love with a Russian nobleman, Count de Gernel, who proposed marriage and was accepted, but broke off the engagement when he found a wealthier lady. The handsome American girl was not, however, to be cast aside so easily. She gained an audience with Czar Alexander II, and laid her case before him, with the result that the count was forced to make good his promises. The bride left her husband at the church door immediately after the ceremony, and went to Milan, where she made her operatic debut in 1886.

She sang all over Europe and America and when at the height of her success injured her voice by over-exertion and was forced to leave the operatic stage. For a time she taught singing in New York, and in 1873 became an actress. She acted with Henry Irving and many other celebrities.

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS.

The first English Sunday newspaper, the British Gazette, issued its first number 145 years ago today, March 26, 1780. It was an immediate success, and, despite the opposition carried on by those who considered Sunday papers impious, the Gazette and Monitor soon had a number of competitors.

The Sunday Observer was started in 1791, Bell's Messenger in 1794, and the Sunday Dispatch in 1861. In the last two decades many sensational Sunday journals that are devoted largely to scandal and publishing details that would not be permitted in America, have sprung up in England and have attained tremendous circulation.

In the United States Sunday newspapers have long been banned as a part of the regular editions of the daily journals, but the development of a distinct type of Sunday edition, with comic, magazine and other features, is of comparatively recent origin.

The Milwaukee Sentinel was the first of the prominent American papers to issue a Sunday edition, both the daily and Sunday editions having been started in 1837. Other pioneers in the Sunday field were the Cleveland Plain Dealer, 1842; the Memphis Commercial Appeal, 1849; the Boston Herald, 1846; and the San Francisco Chronicle, 1845.

Fire Bug Busy In Binghamton

Eight Alarms Within a Few Hours—One Fireman Killed, Others Overcome by Smoke, in All Night Fight With Flames.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Binghamton, N. Y., March 26.—One fireman was killed and a score of others were overcome by smoke in an all-night fight when flames started throughout the business section of the city by a pyromaniac, who is being sought by city and county officials today. Meanwhile, firemen are digging in the ruins for evidence of the source of the fires that caused eight alarms within a few hours. The property loss will be half million dollars.

Horace C. Brainard, a fireman, was drowned when the floor of the Coffee Den, a restaurant, collapsed and carried him into the water-filled basement. Ammonia fumes from a refrigerating plant hampered rescue work and before he could be taken from the pile of concrete in which he had fallen he had drowned. Battalion Chief Van Cleave was badly injured at the same time.

The first alarm was run at 5:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The flames were in the basement of a furnishing store. Here the firemen had little difficulty but soon were recalled to a basement two doors distant from the first fire. The first companies were unable to control the situation and the "three two's" summoning all the apparatus in the town was sounded.

It was at this fire that Brainard was killed. The firemen were nearing control when another alarm was sounded from the Westcott block at Court and State streets, a block from the other fires in Washington street. This divided the apparatus and then another alarm was rung from the north side of the city. This was found to be false. Several alarms were rung for grass fires.

Rotarians Told of Coal Problems

Some of the Questions Which Dealers Must Determine Outlined by Samuel M. Watts at Weekly Luncheon of Rotary Club.

One new member and several visitors were welcomed at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club, flowers were ordered sent to two members who are ill, a 100 per cent registration for the district conference at Lake Mohonk was reported, nominations for new directors were made and S. M. Watts gave a vocational talk on the retail coal business. Mr. Watts said in part:

In considering the subject today let us bear in mind that we are referring to the sale and distribution of anthracite, and that, wholly as a retail proposition, serving the domestic and mercantile trade.

Let me try and impress you with the fact that the retail coal merchant is engaged in a legitimate, upright merchandising trade, and not altogether a parasite upon the community or living on the misfortunes of other people.

He is, generally speaking, a citizen of the community who pays his honest share of the taxes, meets his obligations fairly well, and tries in a humble way to serve the community and earn an honest living for himself and family.

Being engaged, as he is, in the sale and distribution of one of the necessities of life, he must provide suitable equipment for handling and distribution, ample storage facilities and a competent organization to meet the needs of the trade under all circumstances.

This requires a considerable investment in the purchase of property suitable to operate the business, machinery for the unloading, storing, screening and loading trucks and horses for delivery equipment, as well as scales, office buildings, etc.

When all of these conditions are met he still has to secure sufficient capital to purchase and carry a stock to meet the needs of his trade, as well as carrying a line of credit for the convenience of his customers.

After these are provided he still has the problem of securing patronage and satisfying them to the extent that they will remain as customers.

Upon the satisfaction and good will of these customers depend the success of his business.

It is the constant study of the problems of the consumer and his aid in the solution of them by supplying satisfactory fuel, that enables the merchant to retain custom.

The continued patronage of a satisfied consumer, even though the tonnage is small, is more profitable and satisfactory than the spasmodic buying of a larger consumer.

Sometimes a customer will complain that he is burning too much coal with little results as to satisfactory production of heat. In these cases the dealer must assist the customer by suggesting the proper size of coal for the particular furnace and, if necessary, an inspection by a plumber to ascertain whether there is trouble with the installation of the heater.

Many times the size of coal recommended by the manufacturer of heaters is not the most economical for the user, it may prove that the heater is installed properly and the heater is satisfactory, yet a cheaper size of coal will produce as good results and save the consumer considerable on his coal bill.

These are only a part of the many problems the dealer must be ready to solve.

More than fifty per cent of the orders that come to the office of the dealer come over the telephone, a great number of the customers pay by check, hence there are many of our customers that we seldom see, and they seldom care to see us as long as we serve them satisfactorily.

Thus you can see our representatives who deal with the customers and come in personal contact with them, are our teamsters and truck drivers. The dealer is judged by the treatment received from these employees, therefore the selection of these employees is very important, and it is a problem at times to select employees who can meet the customer as our representative, as well as drive a truck or a horse, shovel and carry coal.

Just a word in reference to the distribution of coal as the dealer must consider it.

The supply of anthracite necessary to meet the needs of the country as a whole, depends entirely upon a continuous production at the mines by a limited number of miners.

In order to produce enough coal these men must work continuously during the year.

Enough coal cannot be produced during the coal burning period to supply the demand; it is therefore necessary that the coal produced during the summer must be stored above ground to be used during the winter.

The most economical place for storage is in the consumer's bin.

Why? It is because it is broken from the mines in large lumps, taken to the breaker, where it is broken into sizes adaptable for domestic use.

During the production of these domestic sizes, there is of necessity a considerable breakage into smaller sizes than is ordinarily suited for domestic use.

These small sizes are graded into what is known as steam coal or the junior steam, and must be put on the market and sold in competition with bituminous coal which has a much less labor production cost and not a manufactured product.

The necessity for disposing of these small sizes at a lower price than it costs to produce them, compels the larger sizes to carry the load of production thereby increasing the cost to the consumer of domestic sizes.

During the late war and the emergency following, many consumers turned to their advantage to use the small sizes in domestic hearths.

Some still profit by the use of these

GOOD LUCK is made by blending several ingredients together. The result is a product that is distinct improvement over existing spreads. It has delicacy of flavor, sound food value and, best of all, is not expensive.

BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER

New Printed Silk in Wrought Iron Design

A distinctively new note in spring fashions is printed silk, deriving its inspiration from wrought iron designs. The charming garment shown was displayed at the fashion show of the National Garment Retail association.

Glitter and Sparkle Is Feature of Chic Frocks

Straight, slim lines and much glitter and sparkle—these are the features emphasized in a study of the clothes worn by smart women. While occasionally brilliant shades are seen, the tendency for the most part is toward delicate and pastel tones and for white enlivened with silver or crystal.

Beads are not by any means passe, but it is used with a great deal more skill than heretofore and with an appreciation of its value in forming designs and patterns that stimulate motifs worn into the fabric itself.

This naturally leads to more individuality, for while many of the frocks are alike so far as line and silhouette go, they differ radically in the application of beaded designs and in the mingling and blending of colors.

A charming exponent of the mode of beaded evening gowns consists of a slip of cloth of silver and over this is worn a tunic of pale pink satin-finished crepe covered with a delicate tracery of silvery embroidery and accented with motifs of beads of a deeper tone of rose combined with silver and crystal.

The huge fan of uncured ostrich is shaded through three tones of rose and is tipped with a faint cloudy blue.

A similar frock has a foundation of silver lace, while the upper part is made of silver brocade in which the design is brought out by an outline of tiny crystal beads.

For the debutante there are the most entrancing frocks of tulle made in period styles with tight bodices and wide, full skirts. Trimmed with garlands of flowers and with knots of silver ribbon, they are most appealing in their artful combinations of modern chic and old-time demureness.

Ashes of Roses in New Hats for Spring Wear

More is heard each day of the color which some call ashes of roses. This is a stylish new shade that always has been liked by the French.

The color is such that it could be nicely developed for the street—that is, in pipings and foldings, and touches of that kind. Last spring it will be remembered, Paris modistes brought out the best color fading on the block that. This new color would fill this need nicely and would be a shade not quite as perishable as the flesh.

Black tulle, gray de Paris, and satin hats are suggested with touches of ashes of roses as a finishing, or perhaps as a piping along the brim edge, or as a piping along the brim edge, and used in conjunction with black cordings of the fabric for a crown side ornament.

In the colors favored especially for spring hats, there are two pinks on the card, the conch shell and the tango, but neither of these is exactly the grayish pink of ashes of roses. These two pinks have been used for entire hats in faille and bengaline, or some of the novelty body straws for winter resort types.

Necklaces, Earrings and Bracelets Are in Colors

Rather freakish is the latest idea in pearl necklaces and earrings, which is to alternate large, colored synthetic pearls, one light, one a deep shade of rose, blue, lavender or green. In one flashy ornament a black pearl is alternated with a white. In the gray the very lightest shade is combined with gunmetal gray, and the same scheme is followed in gold, brown and all the other possibilities of color combinations.

To match these novel necklaces are the earrings, one light and one darker, of the same color, a one-sided effect that is decidedly unique. Bracelets, a flexible model made of a single circle of large colored pearls, are among the new trinkets, and in these the alternated style, as in the necklace and earrings, is worn somewhat.

Clothing and hats are particularly desired, and every member of the Exchange is earnestly requested to give some personal belongings to this sale.

"THEY ARE WEARING"—Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Fifth avenue is beginning to blossom out in a riot of color, judging from the millinery which is being worn at this time. The majority of the hats are small, simply-trimmed felts, with the fuchsia and petunia shades leading, although all the bright henna, rust, and burnt orange tones are also widely sponsored.

One of the smartest women on Fifth avenue the other afternoon topped a slim coat of black cloth with a bluish pink felt hat trimmed with a bow of itself at the side back.

Pastel felts in delicate beige yellow or straw tints are also making their appearance.

To add to the colorful season which is being launched, the gay scarf is persistently noted, especially where the two-piece tailored suit is worn. There were at least six of these noted at a fashionable New York hotel, and along Fifth avenue, developed mostly in mannish, miniature of no special pattern, Oxford and higher tones of gray were important, and the jackets of hip-length had four-button fastenings. Either the scarf was separate or part of the blouse.

Matron and debutante have subscribed to the vogue for pearls, and a woman past 60 was recently seen wearing many festoons of tiny pearls together with one long necklace. Above this she had a choker band of black velvet ribbon.

NETWORK OF HIGH VOLTAGE LINES IN INTERCONNECTION PLAN

Map shows principal lines included in recent development of interconnection of power sources.

Further Inter-Connection of Power Sources Effected

By the closing up of a short gap near Syracuse with a high voltage transmission line recently the Central Hudson System of Gas & Electric Companies is now in direct connection with systems extending from Detroit, Mich., to Boston, Mass. There is thus completed a network of lines over which electric energy is transmitted between some of the principal power sources of the northeastern part of the United States. Communities in the Central Hudson Region, while they have long enjoyed the benefits of an interconnected system extending throughout the region, and for some time have been in direct connection by means of a high tension steel tower line with the Adirondack System to the north and with companies on the south are now using power which, in some mysterious way, pulsates through a great system of wires extending over many hundreds of miles. This method of interconnecting power sources, the relaying of quantities of energy from one system to another, and from one city to another, is a triumph of engineering skill. It is a Twentieth Century achievement thus to be able to bring POWER over long distances to points where it can be used to best advantage.

In the steam age people and industry flocked to and settled around power sources, water powers and steam plants. This built up great crowded, smoky, grimy cities. In this new age, power is brought from the water fall, from the steam plant, to the factory which may be located anywhere, in open spaces, and where it is more comfortable and pleasant for people to live.

The new era means that a gradual revolution of social conditions may be expected, and the generations to come will not be obliged to live huddled up in cities, but may make their homes out where the air is pure, where they may have their homes and gardens amid surroundings that make for health and happiness.

The bringing of energy for industry, for the home, for the village and for the city from distant points will gradually tend to build up smaller communities. It will bring people back to villages, hamlets and farms, away from the congested centers where life is difficult and living will do

Electricity on the Farm

In addition to the helpful uses to which electricity can be put in the farm home, it is being demonstrated that electric power can also be utilized to advantage in farm work. In many farm households, besides lighting, electricity is used for washing, ironing and cleaning. Many also have percolators, toasters, curling irons, hot pads and other convenient electrical devices.

In farm work, electricity is proving especially useful for pumping water both for stock and in some places for irrigation during dry spells. It is also used in preparing feed for stock and may be employed also in such seasonal jobs as cutting silage, sawing wood, etc.

A well lighted barn, lights in the chicken house, tool house, dairy house, etc., spell greater efficiency and are welcomed by farmers.

In the Central Hudson Region, during 1924 a total of 75 miles of rural lines were built, bringing the benefits of electric service to many homes and farms distant from the populated centers.

There are many reasons why an investment in a good public utility is likely to be safe, but one of special weight is that the utility deals in commodities that are among life's real necessities. This is especially true of gas and electricity.

Modern civilization is so closely linked up with the services these utilities render, that they have long since passed from the luxury class. There is no stocking up against probable future demands. Each day's production is consumed at once. It is also a business practically free from the long time credit feature. It has not the risks that attend ordinary industrial undertakings. It therefore operates on a much narrower margin of profit, but it is a safe margin.

What the electric man now realizes is that while he is offering something that is astonishingly cheap, it will be sold hereafter in constantly increasing quantities on the basis of what this service will do.

Instead of selling electricity he will be selling clean rugs, clean clothes, fatigues, washdays, cozy rooms, beauty, comfort, convenience. Compared with every other great thing that contributes so greatly to the well being of the race electricity is very cheap, but it should be sold and it should be bought, not because it is cheap, but because of what it will do.

The Electric Man's Mistake

When electrical men get together and talk shop they frequently talk about what they consider their "big mistake". It is a pretty good sign when a man is willing to admit his mistakes. It depends somewhat upon the character of the mistake.

The electric man's mistake, it seems, is that he has spent too much energy telling about the cheapness of the service rendered. He has been inclined to measure it by the dollars and cents standard, instead of measuring it in terms of what the service will do.

If an automobile salesman were to try to sell the idea of getting from one place to another strictly on the basis of cost per mile, he would be beaten before he got started. He sells the idea of getting from one place to another in terms of speed, comfort, thrill and all that goes to make up the urge to own an automobile.

What the electric man now realizes is that while he is offering something that is astonishingly cheap, it will be sold hereafter in constantly increasing quantities on the basis of what this service will do.

Instead of selling electricity he will be selling clean rugs, clean clothes, fatigues, washdays, cozy rooms, beauty, comfort, convenience. Compared with every other great thing that contributes so greatly to the well being of the race electricity is very cheap, but it should be sold and it should be bought, not because it is cheap, but because of what it will do.

Maple Sap Runs In 5,000,000 Trees

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Montpelier, Vt., March 26.—"Sap's running." Tapping has begun.

In other words, 5,000,000 maple trees in the Green Mountain State are delivering maple sap, which will be made into syrup and sugar for American homes.

Maple sugar men state that the price paid to the producers by the large buyers will be about the same as last year for the higher grades, but less for the lower grades.

Farmers have the usual labor shortage problem this year. Experts, however, do not expect any unusual trouble. The fact that unemployment is reported in some of the industrial centers is not looked on as a source of relief, as it is impossible to induce the residents of cities to go out into the sugar belt.

The weather will govern the situation as far as the size of the crop is concerned. Maple sap depends upon the sky.

Seed Testing Week Designated

To Begin Monday, March 30, by Commissioner Pytko—Says Poor Quality Seed Has No Place in Agriculture Today.

Commissioner Berne A. Pytko of the Department of Farms and Markets has designated the week of March 30 as seed testing week in New York State. Commissioner Pytko points out that poor quality seed has no place in the agriculture of today, and urges that throughout the state there be exercised the greatest care in the selection of seed. The week of March 30, has been fixed upon as seed testing week for the purpose of bringing pointedly to the attention of farmers the necessity of careful seed selection.

So important is this matter, the commissioner states, especially with regard to corn, that the United States Department of Agriculture has sent out a notice saying preliminary reports obtained on the seed corn situation indicate it is serious and that care and foresight must be resorted to if it is to be met. The backward spring of 1924 was followed by unfavorable growing weather in the corn states, the Federal Department urges, resulting in delay in the maturing of the corn crop, so that in August the seed prospect for 1925 was most threatening. It is stated that very little of the seed corn was perfectly matured when gathered and that practically all of it contained an excessive amount of moisture. Instructions on germination tests have been sent out by the State College of Agriculture and may be obtained from or the county agricultural agents.

The commissioner calls attention to the need for careful selection of other than seed corn. A statement by the department says:

"Whatever a man sows, that shall he also reap. Poor quality seed is bound to reproduce itself. It is poor policy to sow seed, the quality of which is not known before it is planted. The farmer should know before the seed goes into the soil that it is of a variety that will bring him the highest returns."

While New York is not considered a corn-raising state, corn is one of the principal crops in the dairy sections, the statement says, and to protect the crop, selection of seed must be carefully made.

The U. S. Department in a bulletin on seed corn says:

"Actual germination tests, in different sections of the country, of seed corn intended for planting in 1925 have shown a viability ranging from almost nothing to more than 90 per cent in the same locality. It is evident, therefore, that the only way to prevent the losses that inevitably follow the use of poor seed corn is to test each lot with great care. If the seed proves poor there is still time to get better seed elsewhere. It cannot be obtained this year at the last minute before planting."

The commissioner urges that the same course be followed with other seeds, and also that farmers familiarize themselves with methods of testing. In this regard it is suggested that the State College of Agriculture and the General Experiment Station have lists of the best producing varieties of all garden and field crops and also the places where the seeds can be purchased.

An illustration of the value of improvement in seed is that in 1836, eighteen pounds of beets were required to produce one pound of sugar; in 1862, ten pounds were required, as the result of improvement in seed; and in 1904, less than seven pounds.

Valuable information on testing seeds may be obtained from the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca or from county agricultural agents.

RADIO CALESTHENICS.

Increasing Chances to Take Morning Exercises With Radio Music.

The health education movement conducted by insurance companies for the benefit of their policyholders has taken a new turn with the enlistment of the radio to teach good health habits.

A studio is in process of construction in the tower of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company from which morning exercises and a weekly evening health talk will be put on the air through a special arrangement with WEAF of New York. WCAP of Washington and WEEL of Boston. Metropolitan policyholders from Pittsburgh to Portland, Me., and from Oswego to Richmond, Va., will be able to tune in.

Policyholders and outsiders will be enrolled in regular exercise classes through the agency force and will be supplied with charts and other special instructions to get the full health value out of the program.

The health purpose of the morning exercise, as the Metropolitan officers plan it, will be to start folks on their day's work cheerful and full of pep. "The state of mind and the state of the blood will be 'recharged' for the day," one officer said.

The exercise will be in three classes every morning, beginning at 6:15, 7:05 and 7:55 a. m., respectively. Each class will be started with the ringing of the Metropolitan chimes. The proper procedure will be for the most energetic members of the family to hop out of bed at the appointed hour and tune in for the chimes which will serve to arouse the others.

No gymnasium apparatus or dumbbells will be required. The music will come over the air. The exercises will be safe and sane for all members of the family.

The Metropolitan radio program will get under way about April 1.

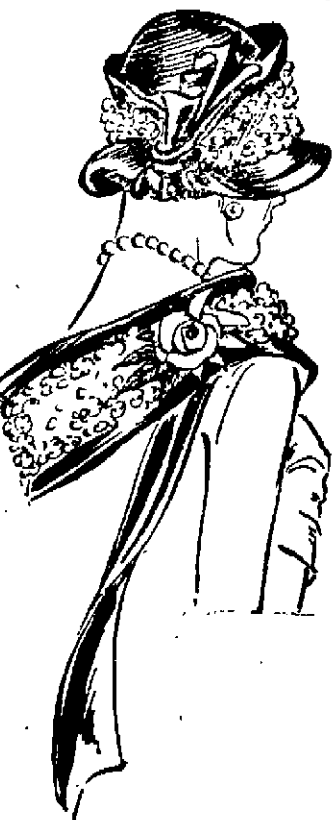

FLOWERS FROM THE SPRING HAT

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

In a recent collection of imported French hats, it was noted that most of the models inclined toward the rounder crown, which, while it still exploits novel treatments in tucks, creases, and pleatings, brings out the fact that the silhouette of the head is much more important than the exaggerated types of the early season. A shape which is particularly stressed is the small type, the brim turning down over the eyes and the back laid or crossed flat up against the crown.

La Monnier sends a smart little tuchata felt, pinched in tucks of a novel design, the brim turned up on one side and down on the other, where two long glass pins are stuck through the crown. Another tuchata felt from the same maker has the crown cut down the center from front to back, and turned back to reveal to show the silk facing, this making an entirely new treatment of a crown.

A little novelty which has been favored by many of the smart Parisiennes lately, and is being displayed in the salons of many of the high-class modistes, is the little boutonniere that matches the flowers used on the hat.

There may be just a single flower employed at the side of the hat and a similar one worn on the lapel of the coat. For instance, carnations are quite the fad of Paris, at present, and, one of the French milliners has used two of these shading from pink to orchid at the side of a little hat of black Milan; with this the single carnation is worn in the buttonhole.

Fifth Straight Pennant for New York Giants

Giants Improved in Pitching and Outfield Show Wini National League Trophy—Pittsburgh No Higher Than Second Place.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, March 26.—With malice toward none and charity for all, the writer names the following as his idea, probably unimportant, of how the National League clubs will finish in October.

- 1—New York; 2 Brooklyn
- 3—Pittsburgh; 4 St. Louis.
- 5—Chicago; 7 Boston.
- 8—Cincinnati; 9 Philadelphia.

The Giants, improved in pitching, improved in outfield material and otherwise just as good as ever they were, which was and is plenty, should come home on the bit. McGraw has a ball club that carries the youth and experience thing to a blend of such nice discrimination that only an unforeseen upheaval seems likely to keep him out of his fifth straight pennant.

The logical contenders, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati and Brooklyn have not improved sufficiently, if at all, to cause McGraw undue misgivings. The Cubs, I was pleased to think, had improved themselves 50 per cent by the Pirate trade, but Maranville's injury has just about leveled that. He will be out for at least two months and the Cubs' defense and general morale will suffer accordingly. They lack a punch in the outfield, anyhow, therefore, third place is the best I can give them.

Whatever prompted Bill McKee to make the trade in question is not of intelligible record. On the face of things, he broke up the best infield in baseball, and regardless of how he may rearrange his material, the defense is certain to suffer without the attack being greatly benefited. If the Pirates go any higher than second place, the rest of the world is in egregious error.

The Reds are weak in outfield and catching strength, as the fellow said. They have only four of the former and two of the latter, all good but not enough. The rest of the team, barring first base, is fool proof—pitching and hitting excellent and the infield well upholstered with reserves of major league ability. Melanes may be obtained from the Braves before Ruben Bressler at first base has his legs shot away from under him.

For a team that ran the Giants right into the wire last year, the Dodgers might seem to be jaded pretty far off the pace in this instance. But the club is aging and men like Fournier, Wheat, Stock and Johnston are in the position of being on the border line. They might or might not stand up through any given campaign. The pitching, notably Grimes and Vance, is of the best, but the left side of the infield will not bear a searching scrutiny.

This also applies to the Cardinals, who however will not have the benefit of the Dodgers' pitching, if any at all. Plenty of Cardinal hits and runs will be wasted on the desert air, as of yore.

The Braves and Phillies attempting to build for the future, and as such, cannot be taken seriously. I deem that the Braves got slightly the better of the shuffle for young men and their pitching figures to be more consistent than anything the Phillies can show; therefore, the latter within the celluloid extinguisher.

NO CHANGE IN BOWLING MATCH AT BUFFALO.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Buffalo, N. Y., March 26.—Not all the hammering of some of Buffalo's crack alley teams in the five man squad of the A. B. C. battalions last night could batter down the defenses protecting the leading ten men.

Turner's No. 1 team of Syracuse, bowling in the late squad, led the way to both squads of the five man event of the A. B. C. with the grand total of 2,840, in which was a game of 1,002, the last of the set. Leaders in the two man and individual events of the A. B. C. held their positions intact, although five squads leveled attacks on the ramparts of the defenders of the high score honors. Wednesday saw no change in the leadership in any of the divisions.

ONLY CORBETT HAS CONQUERED STAGE

Many High-Class Boxers Have Made Attempt and Proved "Busts."

Benny Leonard has retired from the ring and will devote his entire attention to theatrical work in the future. Benjamin believes he is gifted with histrionic ability and can make good as an actor.

Benny is conceited enough to think that if Jim Corbett can earn a comfortable income from stage-work and writing articles for newspapers and magazines that he can be equally successful. Leonard overlooks the fact that of all the pugilists who tried to become actors, Corbett was the only one to succeed "Gentleman Jim" always was gifted in that respect and improved himself by hard study. Jimmie Britt gets by pretty well in a vaudeville act, but John L. Sullivan, Jim Jeffries, Jack Johnson, Battling Nelson, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack McAuliffe, Al Kaufman, "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, Marvin Hart and Tommy Ryan proved "busts" in their efforts to elevate the theatrical art.

Leonard will learn that his drawing powers soon will wane now that he has hung up his gloves and tightbats. The public during the past year flocked to see Leonard do his stage stunts because he was the world's champion, but now that he will be referred to as an ex-champion, theatrical patrons will not be so eager to lay down their coin to watch him perform.

Jezebel Zachary Almost Member of Athletics

Aftermathing the baseball classic in Shibe park's tower recently, Roy Mack unearthed the reminiscence that Jezebel Tecumseh Zachary, sixth game hero and thereby savior of Washington, once pitched for the A's.

Twice, by actual count. In the summer of 1918, Zack, a Tarheel collegian, reported at Shibe park for a trial. As is Connie's way, Zack got his trial the self-same afternoon, while his return ticket to North Carolina was still good.

Pitching under the name of Walton, he won the game, the Macklets scoring ten runs in the first inning. He stayed a few days and pitched another game, then had a date with the army and departed thence.

That summer Connie Mack wasn't signing any players for the next season, for it was rather doubtful whether there would be a baseball season in 1919. So Zack left Shibe park a free agent, but with the suggestion that he call around later, when the war had settled a bit.

In the spring of 1919 Zack took a train for Philly, but by the break of lock he got on the train which was bearing the Washington Senators to Philadelphia to open the season there.

Learning the facts, and that Zack was a free agent, Clark Griffith signed him up, and by stepping in ahead of the tall tactician the Old Fox thereby made sure of the 1924 world's championship.

After Titular Honors

Here is pictured Al Simmons, lightweight champion of England, as he arrived here to enter the scramble for world's titular honors. The retirement of Benny Leonard leaves the championship open, and it is very likely that Simmons will enter the eliminating tournament that will be staged.

Interesting Career of Veteran Catcher Gibson

George Gibson, veteran catcher and former pilot of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has become coach of the Chicago Cubs, succeeding Oscar Dugger. Gibson, a student of the "old school," started his baseball career with the Buffalo club in 1903. He joined the Pirates in 1904, remaining for ten years. While with the Pittsburgh club he established a major league record for catching consecutive games. This record of 150 games stood until Ray Schalk of the White Sox took the honor by backstopping in 131 consecutive games.

Gibson went to the New York Giants in 1917 and 1918, but was sent to Montreal the following year. Pittsburgh claimed Gibson as manager in 1920, but in 1922 he was succeeded by William McKee.

The new coach the following season coached the Washington club, under the management of Duke Bush. Last season Gibson spent his time training and coaching.

Such popularity must be deserved

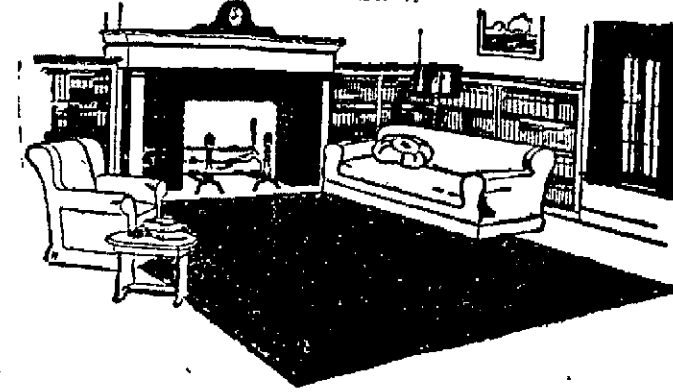

AMONG the many factors contributing to Mr. Belasco's success is his knack of anticipating changes in popular taste. And this knack is just as important in other fields. For example, Chesterfield was first made in anticipation of a change in cigarette taste. The change came... how completely Chesterfield met the new demand is proved today by its unprecedented and sustained popularity.

Woman to Essay Channel Swim

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Weymouth, England, March 26.—Undaunted by the defeat which younger women have met at the buffets of the English Channel, Mrs. E. Craven, aged 50, and a grandmother, announced that she will make an attempt this summer to swim the channel.

Mrs. Craven is a nurse and swimming is her hobby. During the past two winters she has bathed almost daily in Weymouth Bay, steeling herself against the cold of the channel waves.

As a preliminary test of her ability, Grandmother Craven will swim from Weymouth to Lulworth, a distance of ten miles.

Federals Beat Yankees, 15 to 13

The Federal basketball team of the Senior Y. M. C. A. League won its last regular game of the season from the Yankee team Monday evening, by a score of 15 to 13. During the last half the game was hard fought. The Yankees outscoring their opponents by three points but the five point lead the Federals secured in the first half was too great for them to overcome.

Robins of the Federals helped greatly in their victory by caging nine of the team's fifteen points while Van Buren and Meeker were high scorers for the Yankees.

The very life of life.

The glory of action—taking out a policy with Dewey & O'Connor.
The splendor of beauty—radiations and reflections of a peaceful mind.
Yesterday is but a dream—with its failures and losses,
Tomorrow only a vision—unless you're well protected,
But today well lived—well insured,

Every tomorrow a vision of hope.
Look well therefore to—your insurance.

Freeman, Noted Engineer, Dead

Chief Engineer of New York-New Jersey Vehicle Tunnels, Married Miss Gertrude Van De Mark of Stone Ridge.

Milton Henry Freeman, chief engineer of the New York-New Jersey vehicle tunnels, died Wednesday at Valhalla, Westchester county, aged 54 years. He had been ill of pneumonia. His wife, who at their marriage in 1917 was Miss Gertrude Van De Mark of Stone Ridge, survives him.

Mr. Freeman died four days after workmen completed construction of the tunnel, and less than four months after he succeeded the first engineer, Clifford M. Holland, who died last October 27, three days before the tunnel was "holed through" and the boring ended. Last Saturday the "sand hogs" quit their compressed air headings, the work of digging completed.

Mr. Freeman entered the employ of the Interstate Tunnel Commission in 1919 as resident engineer. In 1921 he was made engineer in charge of construction and directed the actual work of digging the tubes. When Mr. Holland died, after a long illness through which Mr. Freeman had acted in his place, the commission appointed him chief engineer and he took office on December 1, twenty-four hours after a blast had broken down the thin wall between the New York and New Jersey borings.

Mr. Freeman was a tunnel engineer of wide experience. In 1905, two years after graduation from the University of Michigan, he joined in building the Pennsylvania tunnels under the East River and continued at that task until 1909 when he was engaged by the New York city board of water supply as inspector in charge of the field shaft party, and subsequently was promoted to carry on experiment work in tunnel construction and given charge of a section of the Narrows Siphon.

He entered the employ of the Public Service Commission in 1914 and remained five years as resident engineer in the construction of the Clark street, Sixth street and Fourteenth street subway tunnels.

He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Brooklyn Engineers' Club and the University of Michigan Club of New York. His body will be taken to Cray Mills, St. Lawrence county, where he was born in 1871, for burial Saturday afternoon.

He was descended from two old New England families. After attending the Potsdam Normal School he taught school until 1899, when he

Hospitality and Again Visit Long Island—May Visit United States in Summer.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, March 26.—It is probable that the Prince of Wales will visit the United States this summer while enroute home from South America.

"While it is not finally arranged nor, definitely decided, it may be arranged," an official of the prince's household said to International News Service today.

It is understood the prince is anxious to accept Mrs. Belmont's invitation to be a guest at her home at Newport. He also desires to visit other friends he made on Long Island last summer.

The prince's schedule allows him three weeks for his return from Argentine. It is likely he will stop off at Jamaica and then proceed to the United States, stopping there several days.

Since people read newspapers every day, and
People read newspaper advertising every day, and People buy merchandise every day.
Why isn't it good business to advertise every day?
Or, at least, to advertise frequently and persistently?
If every day is a good day to try to sell goods, then
All days are good days to advertise your store—your

Inquest in Rifton Death

Judge about the case at his shop on Saturday following the finding of the body. It was about 8 o'clock in the morning, he thought. No one else was present.

Mr. Wright said he had first asked Dolson if he knew Bond was dead and Dolson said he knew it and remarked that it was "queer." Mr. Wright said they had heard he was drowned and knew very little about it at that time. Later he said he had heard that it was "funny he was drowned so quick."

It was Mr. Wright who first mentioned the matter to Mr. Alsdorf. He said he had talked to about six people about the matter and then named several of the people he had talked to in the village. He said he thought he had talked to quite a few more. None of the people had been near Rifton or knew anything about the matter or how Bond had died. He said they had been told the cause of death was drowning.

No Knowledge, But "It's."

Asked by Mr. Flanagan if he had any personal knowledge as to whether there had been any foul play, Judge Wright said he did not. "If the report of the public is true as to what he was doing, there is a possibility of foul play," continued Mr. Wright.

It was the first of the week that he heard of the scorched eyebrows and mustache. Mr. Wright said Mr. Pine and Mr. Bevier noticed it and also the coroner had told he saw it, he thought.

Asked if he had any information based on facts as to the cause of death, he said he had none based on facts.

"In your own mind have you a thought as to the cause of death?" asked Mr. Flanagan.

"Yes, it is not based on the talk of people or on facts," it was Mr. Wright's own opinion. He thought there was no foul play. He, however, said he believed in a thorough investigation where any death had taken place under unusual circumstances.

A "Might Have Been" Opinion.

Gilbert Bevier was next called. He resides in Gardiner and knew Bond at Chappie's. He saw the body when Mr. Pine carried it into the Bond house on Saturday. He assisted. He saw no cuts or wounds to lead him to think there had been foul play. There was a slight scratch on the nose and head but not sufficient to be fatal. He said he had no direct knowledge as to cause of death. He had an opinion that Bond might have been hurt in an explosion of a still. He said he saw no bruises on the body and now after the testimony of finding water in the lungs he had changed his opinion and now thought the cause of death was drowning.

A Sister's Activity.

Gertrude Cashdollar, who resides at Newburgh and is a sister of the dead man, was called. She said her brother was 51 years old. On the evening of the 14th she heard her brother was dead. The undertaker notified her. She went to Gardiner on Sunday afternoon. On Monday she communicated with the officials in regard to the matter. She called the district attorney and the coroner on Thursday, March 19, the day after the funeral. She was not present at the autopsy. She said she had known Chappie when she was a girl about 14 years old. She does not know Pinard.

Asked if she had observed her brother's face, she said she had and "it looked very suspicious, his eyebrows were scorched and also his mustache, too. On the left of his head was a mark also."

She last saw her brother in the fall. She talked to her brother John about the matter. She had no personal information as to the cause of death.

What She Overheard.

She said she overheard people say that Gordon Bennett knew all about it and how it happened. His mother said it looked very strange.

She did not think he was drowned, she said. His head looked very suspicious and a man who had been about the water so much as he had, she thought, would have made a struggle when he fell in the water. She said she had an opinion he had been hit on the head. She never knew that water had been found in his lungs until after he was buried.

Not Yet Convinced.

Asked if she was now satisfied that her brother had died from drowning after hearing the evidence and the testimony of the doctor, in relation to the condition of his lungs, she replied that she would "have to be satisfied now that such evidence had been produced that he had been drowned. Now they say there was water in his lungs and I suppose he was drowned."

Coroner Sailer informed her that she did not have to suppose he was drowned and he wanted to satisfy her mind that the verdict of accidental drowning was right. He asked her to produce any evidence she desired in the case.

She said she had no evidence he had been struck on the head but she thought he would have made a struggle if he had simply fallen in the shallow creek. She had been told he had had two glasses of beer and did not think that he was a man who would drink if he had a chance but she had been told he had but two glasses of beer that day.

"Have you any reason to believe he died from any other cause than drowning?" asked the coroner, and her reply was "I can't say I have." She seemed in doubt and not entirely satisfied.

Possibility of Lightning "Smoked."

In regard to the scorched eyebrows and mustache she said her brother smoked and he might have singed them while lighting a smoke. She denied that she had any information as to the cause of death. She had not expressed at that time any difference with him as to his verdict.

Queer For Summer to Drown.

Anna E. Hadden, another sister from Newburgh, said she learned of the death at the time her sister did

An adjournment was taken until April 8 at 10 o'clock, when any citizen will be given an opportunity to produce any evidence desired in the matter.

Known Nothing Except Rumors.

Fred Dolson was the witness called. He lives at Gardiner. Know nothing. Saw him at the funeral and saw the eyebrows and mustache were singed. He said he had expressed no opinion as to the cause of death and had no opportunity to see the body of death other than people said he was employed in operating a mill.

satisfied "in a way" that Bond had been drowned. Mrs. Johnson said "the people think he was tossed and laid face down in the water." That was what people in Gardiner said. It was only a rumor to her, no one had told her that.

"Could water be in the lungs if he were tossed?" was asked by the coroner and she replied that it probably could not.

Also Said He Was Gaseous.

Mrs. Ella Johnson, an aunt with whom Bond lived at Gardiner, was called. Wednesday morning her nephew went to work at Rifton. Saturday she heard of his death about 8 o'clock. John Hadden told her. Her nephew was "unhappy" and under his home stay her brother time. She saw a cut on his head and noticed his eyebrows and mustache were singed. They were not burned off but were scorched and "turned up" in a curl. John and Frank Bond were at the autopsy and she said she knew water was found in the lungs. The brother was

Rules in Duso League Too High

Say Alumni of Poughkeepsie High School—Athletes at Bridge City School Said To Be In a Mess.

Poughkeepsie High School athletes are in a mess, whether it is the fault of the officials of the school or the students is some thing, which several alumni of Poughkeepsie are trying to find out, says the Poughkeepsie Evening Star.

One of the big reasons the alumni say why the teams have only a few trying out is the fact that the Poughkeepsie school officials demand higher requirements than other schools in the valley and state. The Duso League law, which was framed by school principals in Kingston, Newburgh, Middletown and Poughkeepsie, demands that a student must have 12½ counts while they state scholastic requirements for tournaments and other branches of athletics are only nine.

Couch Kallach was highly praised by the Alumni for the athletic spirit he was not to be very keen.

Efforts will be made to get Poughkeepsie back in the spotlight. Prominent alumni members have promised to help the coaches get boys out for the team and also have promised to try to help up their scholastic standings. The Duso League rules, they contend, should be the same as the state rules, and at the next meeting efforts will be made to get the requirements lowered and perhaps then, the alumni say, more boys will report for the teams.

Carlyle Boys Are Likely to Succeed

In Major Leagues This Season—Brothers, Both Outfielders, Can Hit Hard and Are Liked by Managers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Tampa, Fla., March 26.—Major league baseball has known many brother acts, notably the O'Neills, the Johnstons, Doc and Jimmy, the Neuseles, the Coveleskis, the Barnes, etc., and because those mentioned were the cream of the field and made good, it is assumed by some that one star in the family will and does create another. Which is several fathers under the truth.

The season of 1925, however, will have as one of its feature offerings the brothers Carlyle of Detroit and Washington, and their chance of keeping good in the majors at one and the same time is said to be more than a bare possibility. Both are outfielders. Both are hitters of rather extraordinary ability—or were in the minors.

Roy, the elder, is with Washington at the moment. He hit .368 with Memphis last year and led the Southern League. He, who is little more than 18, is believed to be so highly esteemed by Ty Cobb that he is being selected by him as his ultimate successor-in-prospect. The younger Carlyle hit .346 with Charlotte last season, his first in professional baseball. He really seems to be an unusual prospect.

If C. has one vital asset which Roy lacks—speed. He can step around the outfield with the best of them or streak down to first base well in front of the average infielder. Roy has no such ability. He merely takes it out in hitting, but does it so often and lustily that the Senators are not disposed to let him get far from their sight. They have more outfielders than they need this year, but if Roy continues to hit like he did with Memphis someone else, performance, will have to go.

Since Washington and Detroit have been nominated to a place among the leading pennant contenders, it is possible that some fine afternoon may see both Carlyles get their chance in the outfield and the age-old equation of brother versus brother will have another revival.

LACK OF AVAILABLE PROMOTERS, SAYS KEARNS.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 26.—Speaking of the sentence imposed on Jack Dempsey by the New York commission for failure to accept Willis's challenge, Jack Kearns today again laid the blame for the situation on the lack of available promoters.

"Rickard, the man most likely to make an acceptable bid, cannot afford to do it now while in federal court on the morning picture case," Kearns said. "Charles Henderson hasn't even got his lumber in for his new place and cannot talk business. I repeat what I have said a thousand times, Dempsey will accept the Will's bout any time we get a good offer from the right man."

TERRIS AWARDED VERY UNPOPULAR DECISION

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 26.—Sid Terris, pride of the East Side, technically had gained one notch of his climb back toward lightweight honors today by the decision he was given over Lew Paluso, of Salt Lake City last night, a verdict which met much popular disapproval.

Paluso was cheered wildly when he left the ring, while Terris was only mildly acclaimed. One critic gave Paluso the second, third, fourth, fifth, eighth and ninth rounds, but the judges evidently liked Terris's fast finish and gave him the decision on it.

Paluso is a contender in the lightweight elimination contests.
